Reaching out

We wish to publicly thank our congressional representatives, Jerry McNerney, George Miller and John Garamendi, who recognize the importance of the Global Alliance for Vaccinations and Immunizations.

By cosigning a letter that proposed to help millions of poor children around the world, we once again show the greatness of our country.

It is very refreshing to have representatives in Congress who understand the importance of helping those who were born in the wrong place at the wrong time, and who believe in the American principle of helping others, rather than those who want to give more money to the richest in our society, who seem to be amassing more each year and sharing less.
